

Finley, Heimlich Cases Remain Under Survey

The University Board of Review—studying the cases of Profs. Moses Finley and Simon Heimlich—held its first meeting Friday afternoon.

Targum learned that the session was held in New York City.

Since the meeting was a closed one—with only the members of the Board of Review, Dr. Jones and the two principals present—no information on any of the proceedings at the meeting were available.

University officials in Queens continued to label the story "top secret" and the only news forthcoming from the University was a statement issued Friday evening by the Public Relations Department.

Prepared by Tracy S. Voorhees, the Board of Review's chairman, it said:

"As chairman of a special committee appointed by President Jones of Rutgers University to advise with him concerning certain questions which have been raised affecting Associate Professor Simon Heimlich of the College of Pharmacy and Assistant Professor Moses Finley of the Newark Colleges of Arts and Sciences:

Committee Meets

"The Committee met today. All of the members of the committee were present. The committee met with each of the professors concerned separately. The committee will meet again at an early date."

Friday, Dr. Jones told Targum that the meeting dates of the committee would not be made public in order to give the committee "the opportunity of meeting without public announcement."

He further stated that this is being done "in all fairness to the two men since "it will make for a philosophical meeting, one free from pressure."

Board Named

The Board of Review was set up last week by Dr. Jones after it was learned that Heimlich and Finley refused to testify before a Senate Internal Security subcommittee attempting to uncover Communist infiltrations within educational ranks.

New York City's Board of Higher Education fired three college professors last night because they wouldn't tell a Senate committee whether they ever belonged to the Communist party.

The three are: Bernard Riess, an associate professor of psychology at Hunter College; Harry Slochower, an associate professor of German at Brooklyn College; and Vera Shlakman, an assistant professor of economics at Queens College—all in New York City. At times the Board of Education had trouble hearing witnesses as students demonstrated outside in behalf of the three who were fired.
